Learn From History - Story Of The Trojan Horse

The Trojan Horse is a tale from the Trojan War about the subterfuge that the Greeks used to enter the city of Troy and end the conflict. In the canonical version, after a fruitless 10-year siege, the Greeks constructed a huge wooden horse, and hid a select force of men inside. The Greeks pretended to sail away, and the Trojans pulled the horse into their city as a victory trophy. That night the Greek force crept out of the horse and opened the gates for the rest of the Greek army, which had sailed back under cover of night. The Greeks entered and destroyed the city of Troy, decisively ending the war.

Metaphorically, a "Trojan Horse" has come to mean any trick or stratagem that causes a target to invite a foe into a securely protected bastion or space (For example - as a constitutionally unqualified person being 'elected' as president of a nation!). It is also associated with "malware" computer programs presented as useful or harmless to induce the user to install and run them.
"We will bury you!" - was a phrase famously used by Soviet premier Nikita Khrushchev while addressing Western ambassadors at a reception at the Polish embassy in Moscow on November 18, 1956. The actual verbal context was: "Whether you like it or not, history is on our side. We will dig you in".

In his subsequent public speech Khrushchev declared: "We must take a shovel and dig a deep grave, and bury colonialism as deep as we can". Later, on August 24, 1963, Khrushchev remarked in his speech in Yugoslavia, "I once said, 'We will bury you,' and I got into trouble with it. Of course we will not bury you with a shovel. Your own working class will bury you" - a reference to the Marxist saying, "The proletariat is the undertaker of capitalism", based on the concluding statement in Chapter 1 of the Communist Manifesto: "What the bourgeoisie therefore produces, above all, are its own grave-diggers. Its fall and the victory of the proletariat are equally inevitable".

Khrushchev repeated this Marxist thesis at a meeting with journalists in the U. S. in September 1959. Modern history revisionists (socialists) now tell us that Khrushchev never said this, never made this statement. You can believe history, or you can believe the liars/revisionists.
Section 1 of Article Two of the United States Constitution sets forth the eligibility requirements for serving as president of the United States:

"No person except a natural born Citizen, or a Citizen of the United States, at the time of the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the Office of President; neither shall any Person be eligible to that Office who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty-five Years, and been fourteen Years a Resident within the United States."

Status as a natural-born citizen of the United States is one of the eligibility requirements established in the United States Constitution for election to the office of President or Vice President. This requirement was intended to protect the nation from foreign influence. Alexander Hamilton, a Convention delegate from New York, wrote in Federalist No. 68 about the care that must be taken in selecting the president: "Nothing was more to be desired than that every practicable obstacle should be opposed to cabal, intrigue, and corruption. These most deadly adversaries of republican government might naturally have been expected to make their approaches from more than one quarter, but chiefly from the desire in foreign powers to gain an improper ascendant in our councils."

St. George Tucker, an early federal judge, wrote in 1803 that the natural born citizen clause is "a happy means of security against foreign influence", and that "The admission of foreigners into our councils, consequently, cannot be too much guarded against." Delegate Charles Pinckney of South Carolina said in a speech before the Senate, "to insure experience and attachment to the country, they have determined that no man who is not a natural born citizen, or citizen at the adoption of the Constitution, of fourteen years residence, and thirty-five years of age, shall be eligible."

On July 25, 1787, John Jay wrote to George Washington, presiding officer of the Convention: Permit me to hint, whether it would not be wise and seasonable to provide a strong check to the admission of Foreigners into the administration of our national Government, and to declare expressly that the Command in chief of the American army shall not be given to, nor devolve on any, but a natural born Citizen. While the Committee on Detail originally proposed that the President must be merely a citizen as well as a resident for 21 years, the Committee of Eleven changed "citizen" to "natural born citizen" without recorded explanation after receiving Jay’s letter. The Convention accepted the change without further recorded debate.

During an 1866 House debate James F. Wilson quoted Rawle's opinion, and also referred to the "general law relating to subjects and citizens recognized by all nations" saying "... and that must lead us to the conclusion that every person born in the United States is a natural-born citizen of such States, except it may be that children born on our soil to temporary sojourners or representatives of foreign Governments, are native-born citizens of the United States."

While many various arguments and opinions have existed through the years, the strictest concept is that BOTH parents must be NATURAL BORN citizens of the United States in order for their child who is born on any U.S. land or territory to be qualified as a NATURAL BORN citizen, instead of simply a NATIVE BORN citizen, or a NATURALIZED citizen.

Words mean things, and there is a distinction with a reason for these three different classes of citizenship.

A proper understanding and viewpoint can only be had when by considering the ORIGINAL INTENT of adding this NATURAL BORN requirement to the Constitution as required qualifications for the President and Vice President, and that ORIGINAL INTENT is that: This requirement was intended to protect the nation from foreign influence.

More extensive information can be found here, which addresses the issue of John McCain, Obama and Rubio as being ineligible for the presidency, and how Congress was complicit in defrauding the people of this nation:

The people of this nation have not learned from history, and have not heeded the sage advice of the founding fathers. We have believed or ignored through the decades, the increasing propaganda and lies of proponents of anti-freedom ideas and philosophies that are meant to destroy our Constitution and the rights of the PEOPLE (Bill of Rights).
In our complacency we watched the ‘Trojan Horse’ (probably of Soviet construction and financing - see Khrushchev statements above), as it rolled to the gates of this nation, and Congress and the people OPENED THE GATES to allow it to enter our borders and into the Oval Office without so much as a whimper or a warning. The ‘Trojan Horse’ was nailed together, formed with elements for the potential accusations of ‘racial bigotry’ to be made against anyone who opposed the socialist ideology of this invader.

Josiah Quincy, speaking in Boston on Tuesday, July 4, 1826, in a speech commemorating the fiftieth year of American Independence, said: "There can be no surer sign that the liberties of a people are hastening to a dissolution, than their countenancing those, who form parties on men, and not upon principles."
